FINDINGS, OPINION AND ORDER

Reyes v. Lindqvist, 234 Petty 567 (2023)

I. STATEMENT OF CLAIM

The defendant has left one mug in the sink every day for eleven consecutive days. Each mug contains an identical amount of cold coffee. I have photographed all eleven.

II. OPINION OF THE COURT

In the case of Reese v. Dishes Left Overnight, 987 Petty 456 (2020), the court established that persistent dish abandonment constitutes a breach of domestic harmony. Though no photographic evidence was tendered, the earnest testimony of Tomas Reyes, corroborated by the conspicuous lack of refutation by Iris Lindqvist, supports a pattern of behavior meriting remediation. The totality of circumstances points to an absence of even token attempts at washing, suggesting a cavalier disregard for shared living space.

III. DISPOSITION

The court finds in favor of the plaintiff, Tomas Reyes.

DAMAGES AND OBLIGATIONS AWARDED

Three (3) washed mugs completed by the defendant within 48 hours, plus a written reflection on the virtues of dishwashing, to be stuck to the refrigerator for one week.

This ruling is final and non-appealable, unless you ask really nicely.
